Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Saturday 11 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Wet and windy for a time.

Today:
A dry and chilly start in the east, otherwise cloudy with outbreaks of rain, heavy at times. Southerly winds will be fresh to strong, but turning milder. Some clearer conditions with a few showers pushing into the northwest by dusk.

Tonight:
Drier and clearer conditions will soon spread across the country this evening. A scattering of showers will affect the north and northwest.

Sunday:
A dry and bright start, then patchy rain pushing in from the south. Very windy later, severe gale or storm force winds developing over the Western Isles and Northwest Highlands.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Severe gale or storm force winds over the Northern Isles early on Monday, otherwise bright with a few showers. Heavy rain in the northwest on Tuesday, drier and brighter Wednesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.